

Mastering the Art of Responsiveness

Month Four - Week One: The Four Human Needs Behind the Business Needs

Review:

Ask Team Members for stories about where they went the extra mile.

What is it?

The topic of today's huddle is: The Four Human Needs behind the Business Needs.

There are business needs and human needs and they are not mutually exclusive. The hospitality business is a business of the heart and our loyalty lies in the heart of the guest.

Why is it important?

ASK: Why is it important to understand the human needs behind the business needs?

Possible response: The guest won't let you meet, or care that you met, their business need if you did not meet their human need and they won't be loyal

How can I do it?

You have to engage your own heart first, so that you care enough to choose to go the extra mile to attend to the guest's human needs. Empathy is the baseline.

Quick Practice:

Let's make a list of what do you want when you are a guest?

Possible responses:

- To be paid attention to
- Acknowledge my presence – don't ignore me
- Be friendly
- Respect my time
- Listen to me
- Be polite

Underneath the things that you all mentioned there are four basics human needs. Guests want to be:

- Heard
- Acknowledged
- Remembered
- Respected

You can also map these core needs to a model that fits with our brand. Show Guests your HEART.

- Hear Them
- Entertain Them
- Acknowledge Them
- Remember/Respect Them
- Trust Them

We'll go into each of these more deeply over the next three huddles.

Mastering the Art:

- Focus this week on the guest's human needs as well as their business needs.
- Bring an example from your life where you practised it.
